Now that our morning contemporary has worked the "bile" off its stomach at the expense of our public schools, the Gazette sincerely trusts it will rest easy, and no longer endeavor to deceive the public by crediting its editorial criticisms to some anonymous writer—the finger marks are too plain to mislead anyone.

Two boys had a narrow escape from drowning in the river this morning. They were out boat riding and capsized just above the Milwaukee street bridge. que, "Nothing but the usual diet which was very plain," replied the mother. After thinking a moment she said, "Oh, yes, he ate thirty-six sticks of locorice, those little ones they sell four for a cent, this morning, but it does not seem that it would cause symptoms of convulsions." The doctor said it was a miracle that so much molasses and shoe blacking had not caused death.

ENGLISH SPARROWS.

They Are a Great Nuisance, and Ought to be Extirpated.

It has probably been noticed by our citizens, merchants and others, says the Racine Journal, that the English sparrows are beginning to build their nests, and they will prove a greater pest this year than ever before, because there are a greater number of them. They delight to build their nests over store doors, over windows and in the various crevices found in the ornamental work on a building. That the English sparrow is a great nuisance must everybody will admit, but how to dispose of them is a difficult problem.

It took about fifteen years to convince the American public that the sparrow was a pest rather than a benefactor. There were protests from naturalists earlier than 1870, and the report that British farmers regarded the bird as a nuisance made some people a trifle nervous. But up to a certain date scores of enthusiastic "benefactors" of the country were urging its introduction in increased numbers, and aiding and abetting those already brought by every possible means even to the enactment of city ordinances and police regulations. During the next decade, however, more opposition was developed, and although sparrow enthusiasts were still providing nesting boxes by the thousand and food by the barrel in many cities where sparrows were few, still there was no little retrenchment in some of the cities where they had become abundant, and the disposition among practical citizens to let the invaders shift for themselves steadily increased. Toward the latter part of this period a few laws which had particularly protected them were repealed, but in very few places were active measures adopted looking to the limitation or suppression of their increase.

W. T. Hill, of Indianapolis, trapped over 40,000 sparrows round the grain elevators and warehouses of that city but the birds continue superabundant in and around that city. Many thousands have also been shot for food, but without visible effect.

It is estimated that at least a thousand times as much energy and money have been expended in fighting sparrows in America as were expended in introducing them. The magnitude of the evil and the necessity for abating it are proved by an analysis of the replies received by the agricultural department as to the damage by sparrows. These reports as to the injury to birds, blossoms, and flocks come from thirty-one states, the District of Columbia, and Canada, and consists of replies from 584 observers. Of these, 265 allege positive damage of varying kind and degree, twelve are indeterminate, and the remaining 307 are favorable to the sparrow, at least negatively, inasmuch as they report no damage of the kind observed.

As to the sparrow's ravages on fruits, garden seeds and vegetables, the opinions are quoted of 788 persons, of whom 472 gave testimony against the sparrow, 270 gave testimony more or less favorable, (but as under the preceding question, mainly negative as the results of observation) and 37 gave testimony which was partly favorable and partly unfavorable. Grapes seem to have been especially injured, and in California, where grape culture is an industry of paramount importance, the English sparrow has taken firm root and is multiplying and spreading with an ominous rapidity; and unless steps are taken to wipe out the pest at the earliest possible moment the result probably will entail a loss to the state of many thousands, if not millions of dollars.

GIVING THE NEWS.

How Facts are Often Suppressed by the Officers Who Fear the Wheels of Justice Will be Closed.

In this advanced age of printing presses and daily papers, where the entire news is brought to the door of the subscriber for the small sum of 15 cents a week, the public thirst for news is easily quenched, and a daily newspaper is one of the necessary adjuncts of every well regulated family. It frequently happens in criminal matters, that the official press is fit to repress the facts in the case,
